It's the busy season at the Ugly Gryphon Inn! The bar is crowded, the inn is rapidly filling up, and you are going to have to take drastic measures – but opening up the adjacent guesthouse. The Little Beak, the quaint little guesthouse next to the Inn, is technically liveable and has been free of pyro-rats for several days now. Might as well open it up and collect a few extra coins!

COMPONENTS

5 Patron Cards
1 Little Beak Guesthouse

SETUP

Shuffle the new patrons into the patron deck.

Place the Little Beak Guesthouse card to the right of where the Inn would be.

GAMEPLAY

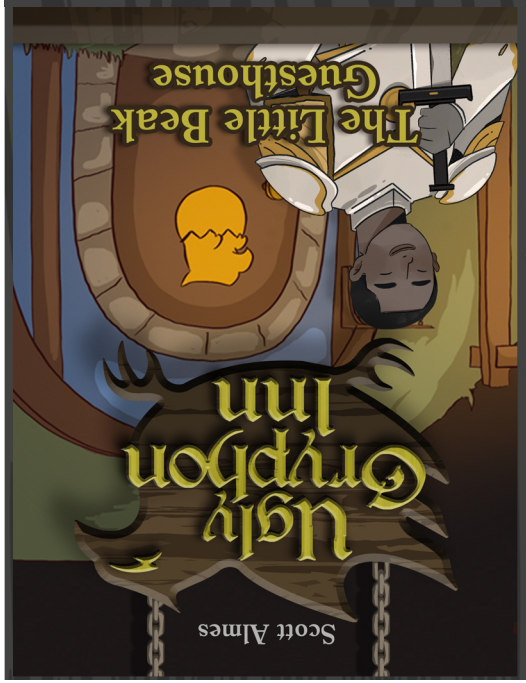

INN PHASE

The selected patron may now be placed in the Little Beak Guesthouse instead of the Inn. The first patron is added directly underneath the Little Beak Guesthouse card (floor 3), and other patrons are added below the patrons already in the Guesthouse.

The Guesthouse can have, at most, one of each quirk ( ). If a patron would exceed this limit, it cannot be added to the Guesthouse.

The Guesthouse cannot hold more than 3 patrons.

When a patron is added to the Guesthouse, only the Inn irks ( ) for the patrons in the Guesthouse are checked starting from the top and working downwards. The main Inn is not checked. Likewise, when a patron is added to the main Inn the Guesthouse is not checked. When checking the Guesthouse, it is considered to be an 'inn' for the resolution of irks and effects from any patrons leaving.

BAR PHASE

Only the patrons in the main Inn can be irked; the patrons in the Little Beak Guesthouse are not checked.

GAMEPLAY

There must be exactly 3 patrons in The Little Beak Guesthouse and the required number of patrons in the main Inn to win the game.

Distressed Druid

If the Druid is on an odd-numbered floor:

The Druid wakes up in a panic, worried that they won't get enough of the morning sun. They switch places with the patron directly above them.

Pious Paladin

If the Paladin is on the third or sixth floor:

The Paladin stays in his room and prays loudly for the souls of those fighting. Irk the patron in the room directly below him.

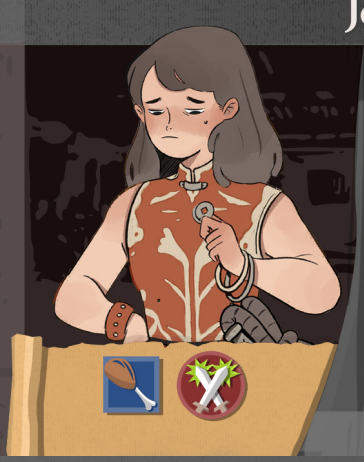

Ornery Oracle

If the Oracle is adjacent to 2 or more types of quirks:

The Oracle looks into the future to see if it's worth staying, then leaves and tells you exactly why. Draw two patrons, then place one back on top of the deck and the other at the bottom.

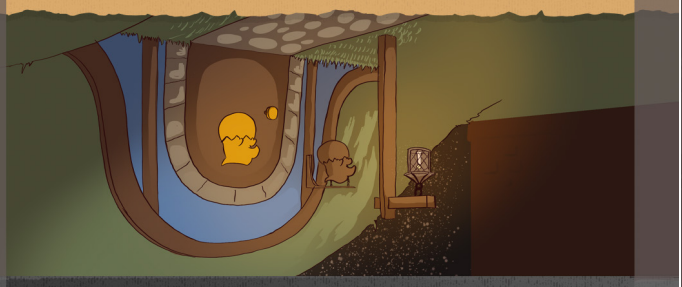

Jobless Assassin

If the Assassin is adjacent to 1 or more Goblin Triplets:

The Assassin leaves, but practices her trade on the way out. Remove the patron at the bottom of the Inn from the game.
